Marjorie M. Smith EDITOR-PUBLISHER

A columnist is no respecter of persons or places when he observes something to share with his readers. An auto touring trip, an easy chair at the radio or TV, social gatherings, club meetings, sporting events) and even a flight above the clouds streaking through space at a rapid clip might seem infertile places. Yet, I have an assembly of notes from hither, thither and yon — on the backs of envelopes, match books, restaurant napkins, and the like — some gathered on the run, some intentionally — but all of interest in varying degrees. And it seems an appropriate time, as this December issue brings the year 1955 to a close, to clear this file so as to make room for the 1956 docket.

Day in and day out, wherever I am, I encounter as many non-collectors as collectors. The former offer a wonderful opportunity for conversion and the talk usually gets around to antiques. Of all the questions I have been asked, I believe the most frequent desire of the uninitiated is to know, how old anything must be before it can be considered an antique. The answer I have accepted, coupled with my experience, is found in so logical a place I doubt if any of my inquirers thought of looking there—in the dictionary, any dictionary. To those critics who scoff at the use of the word antique to describe anything less than 100 years old, the dictionary interpretation is recommended. Older dictionaries define the word both generally, and in point of time. For example, a 1937 edition gives these two definitions: 1. old; ancient; of genuine antiquity; in the sense it usually refers to the flourishing ages of Greece and Rome. 2. Old, as respects the present age . . . of old fashion. The most current dictionaries realize that the word meaning has taken on considerable latitude in the last decade or so, and have revised their definitions accordingly. A 1951 abridged edition merely defines antiques as: Any relic of an earlier or ancient time; an old-fashioned object, esp. of house furnishings.

During many of my automobile trips I have seen antiques shops, together with which whose owners were engaged in other businesses — Antiques — Florist; Antiques — Motels; Antiques — Gifts; Antiques — Dining Room. But somehow I can't seem to forget the sign I saw last summer on a road in Central Pennsylvania. It read, simply: Antiques — Beer. It would be interesting to see a complete list of just how many different types of businesses there are in conjunction with the sale of antiques.

While on the subject of travel, we've mentioned before that Spinning Wheel is a regular passenger on eighty of Capital Airlines flagships. When a hostess on the Baltimore to Detroit flight offered me my choice of magazines last summer I asked for Spinning Wheel. "You mean the little magazine on antiques?" she queried. "Oh, yes, it's always put aboard each month but it doesn't stay long. The passengers have a habit of taking it along. At least I guess that's where it goes. It's never in the rack when I'm asked for it." She didn't know me, but somehow I'll never forget her for what she didn't realize was a lovely compliment.

Around noon on October 1 on a trip through Baltimore I unsuspectingly tuned the car radio to NBC's Monitor program, which was bringing its audience that day, among other events, direct broadcasts from the Joe and Opal Streeter Auctions in Claremore, Oklahoma. Twice while I was listening, we were switched back to Claremore where I looked forward to hearing some familiar collectible go under the hammer. My first surprise was when the announcer's descriptive script referred to the merchandise as "5 acres of the strangest collection " Each time NBC returned to the auction thereafter, to let the listening audience hear some specific item sold, they concentrated on the odd and unusual, (the largest stuffed moose in existence was bought for $700 by a car dealer in Springfield, Ill.) or the commonplace, (an old school bell). I couldn't help wondering why a broadcasting company would attach so much importance to such items for a national broadcast when industrial antiques, antiques of transportation, firearms, toys, musical antiques, and a multitude of old home furnishings abounded in Joe and Opal Streeter's list. It was this same list I referred to, anonymously, in last month's column. The 6 life-sized, mounted animals offered were in the most infinitesimal minority to the abundance of pieces, which had they been included in the broadcast, would have been of decidedly more interest to the hundreds of thousands of U. S. collectors that Saturday afternoon.

From the December issue of a magazine published 100 years ago, December 1855, we read the editor's comment titled "Close of The Volume": "With this number ends volume fifteenth. We feel anxious as we write. Shall we lose any who have been subscribers for 1855? Some few we know, who have removed or died, we must lose, but shall we part company with any from their lack of interest in the work itself? We trust not." And on this plaintive note in the year 1855 when there existed not half the distractions to take one's mind from reading as there are today, one editor closed his fifteenth volume.

To Spinning Wheel readers, this editor closes volume number eleventh in pleasant anticipation of beginning the twelfth — and bids you, one and all, a Blessed, Peaceful Christmas season.

Seen At A Recent Antiques Show

One of the feature attractions at the Third Annual Antiques Show, Vandalia, Ohio was The Patch. A mouth-watering display of old-fashioned goodies was included in this country store display which also offered the show visitor varieties of stone ground flours and meals, pure maple syrup and sorghum. Clyde Haynes, operates The Patch on a year round basis on the Shiloh Springs Road outside of Dayton, Ohio. His miniature country-store set-up appealed to the casual visitor as well as to those intent on adding to their collections—and there was a lively number of both at this show sponsored by the Miami Valley Antiques Dealers Association.

COLLECTOR BOOK BUYS

Christmas Message
from
Dr. Larry Freeman

Buying collectibles and gifts by mail has its problems. Many things are vaguely described as "just lovely", and some of the best buys get overlooked by lack of splashy advertising. In business over 25 years, I want you to know what is happening to the American book field and act according to your best judgment . . . Time and again, we hear antiquers say "Well, I won't buy this new book; it's too expensive and I know enough about that field anyway". How very foolish to deny yourself the facts it took years to collect, when for the $5 involved you could have learned which is the $50 item and which $5 price tag is really worth only 50 cents. Perhaps you think you can borrow the book somewhere or buy it cheaply at an auction. May I assure you this doesn't happen. Printing costs have doubled since the war. Many large publishers have lost their shirts publishing collectors' books and are off them for life. Four years ago when we started Antiques Book Club, there were a lot of these books we could get for you at "remainder" prices. No longer true, and as the largest exclusive Americana publishers we make very limited editions, sell to libraries with no fanfare and tell collectors by small ads only. So books like those listed below become great treasures and prized gifts from friends. Send for them and see for yourself; and to everyone buying $6 or more will go free, both our expensive new catalog (we publish over 50 books), also our new 4-color book on history and music of Christmas Carols.

1. The new 5th edition of LIGHT ON OLD LAMPS, which the late Chas. Messer Stow called "writing a model of condensed clarity" is just out!! Completely revised, greatly enlarged, etc. $4 postpaid.

2. IRIDESCENT GLASS (see Spinning Wheel review, Nov. pg. 24) is going like hot cakes, get yours at $4.50.

3. Loveliest nostalgic gift for young and old is our 100 year pictorial "ALBUM OF WEDDING MEMORIES", in color with places for own pictures. Made to sell at $5.50; this month only $2.50 with other order.

4. Top Color Plate booklets on Early American Occupations (see Spinning Wheel review Nov. pg. 24). THE COUNTRY STORE and THE OLD APOTHECARY SHOP, both for only $2 postpaid.

5. Great News: The long awaited list two Furniture Handbooks are on press FEDERAL-EMPIRE and PERIOD FURNITURE, to be sold at $2.50 each. If you don't have the others (VICTORIAN and PRIMITIVE PINE), order at $2.50 each now, as these are in short supply and won't be reissued.

6. Kamm GLASS PITCHER BOOKS are now ours: we sell what remains of Nos. 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8 (1 & 2 already out-of-print), the 6 books for $10.50. Only 6, 7 and Mrs. Kamm's last No. 8 sold separately, at $2 each.

7. China Books: don't forget MAJOLICA, EUROPEAN, IRONSTONE, and Kamm's OLD CHINA at $2.50 ea., or HAVILAND-LIMOGES and HAND PAINTED, in colors at $3.50 each.

Gift wrapped if so requested.

MEMO FROM: Marcia

WRAP IT UP: We'd just received a fascinating newspaper clipping from Howard Jamieson of Suisun, California, showing an 1866 travel poster of the Overland Mail Route from Sacramento to Oregon (you could make this fast trip in 6 days "over the railroads" to Oroville and by stagecoach to Portland at a through fare of $50) and were considering the decorative possibilities of such old time posters, though bewailing their fragility, when along came a note from the Saran Wrap people. Seems Saran Wrap, which you can purchase in any grocery store (comes in 12 or 18" wide rolls) is excellent for the preservation of old and rare documents. Moisture doesn't travel through it, so it's a thorough protection against dust, fingerprints, humidity, mildew and all the other deteriorating elements that paper relics fall heir to. Seems like such a dandy idea, not only for items that are kept in files, but for pin-ups, too, we can't wait to get home tonight and Saran Wrap our Map of Boston that's acquiring liver spots over our desk this minute!

STEEL MUSEUM AND VOCATIONAL GUIDANCE: An important work done by the Worcester Pressed Steel Company and its adjoining John Woodman Higgins Armory (Spinning Wheel November '55) is with vocational guidance. Close to 2,000 students each month come to review the history of the steel industry in the museum, and to move on through the plant—during working hours—to observe a modern operation. As an expression of the belief that work with hands as well as head is necessary to satisfactory psychological development, the company's near-future plans include an Armorer's Craft Shop where boys may bring their own empty tin cans and fabricate their own suits of armor and heraldic shields. That every factory is an educational institution is best expressed by the company President, John Woodman Higgins, in an article written for Industrial Education Magazine: "Since industry has outgrown and abandoned the apprenticeship and guild training systems and now depends upon professional schools to educate her craftsmen, every manufacturer owes active support to his local trade schools and an open door to his plant. Every factory is a potential educational demonstration museum and should open its doors to a visitor's walk-way, and an exhibition of its products, past, present and projected — to attract qualified recruits, to inspire machine workers, to inform the public and to reveal the fun in business." Is there an industrial Museum in your town. Can't you help encourage one?

NOVEMBER COVER: To follow the fortunes of the painting of Mayflower antiques which appeared on our November cover, it is interesting to know that the original has recently been purchased by an important collector, Mr. T. J. Watson. Mr. Watson is Chairman of the Board of International Business Machines, Inc. and has been instrumental in assembling the IBM collection of 144 paintings from 72 nations, which was first shown at the World's Fair in New York City. The collection will eventually be housed in a museum being erected by the company at Endicott, N. Y. where the factory is located. The cover painting, however, goes not to the museum, but will hang in the Watson home in New Canaan, Connecticut.

Saran wrapped Americana from the large collection owned by Samuel A. Cousley, New York City, and used in displays by various concerns, include: 1863 theatre program from Willard Theatre, Washington, D. C.; original sheet music by Stephen Foster, "Old Black Joe", published by William Hall & Son Music Company, 1851; "Frank Merriwell" story printed by Street & Smith, 1901; "Buffalo Bill's First Trail", published by Beadle & Adams, 1880; and a 100-yr. old valentine in the lower left hand corner.

The Jolly Tavern Keeper offers FYNE FERNITURE

A delightful Pembroke drop leaf table in cherry, with square tapering legs, it is wood pegged, the top is 17x36" closed, with 2—8½" leaves so that it opens to 34x36", nice fitting edges, narrow dovetailing in the drawer, good winglike leaf supports and the whole in clean ruddy shellac finish at $80 crated.

This utility table, probably from a farm kitchen has the wide one-board pine top that is hard to find these days, 27x41", cleat ends, some roughness, but no paint, the legs are maple, with nice button feet, in old sumac red, one leg has been mended at the top $40 crated.

Unusual homemade column of drawers, 5 of them, one above the other, a utility piece 45" high, the drawers varying in size within the square column that is about 14x14" with top overhanging a bit, white china knobs, mixed woods $15 crated.

This comfortable old Boston rocker has had new rockers and some strengthening, but is good and useful and above all has good original color and decoration $25 crated.

Here's a true open top dry sink (not a commode) in lovely pine, completely refinished natural and ready to use. It's 32" long, 17" deep, 30" high, the top tray, often used these days for house plants is the preferred 6" depth, it has a good door with a cute wooden pull, and a shelf inside. The tray edge is of rugged ¾" stock and the whole thing is the compact smaller size that is most useful in smaller homes $50 crated.

One of the popular 4-drawer cottage chests, very much in the rough with paint, etc., but a good one with scalloped bottom, rounded corners, paneled ends, it's 33x17", 35" high and can still give years of use at $25 crated.

Intriguing maple bed steps, the two-level, set back style, 13" wide, 14" high, 9" deep, the old step pads have been removed, but it's in the rough, one end has been mended $10.

Current Version of the 1454 Christmas Tree of Old England

The Candle Trow

"Do-it-yourself"* enthusiasts will find it easy to duplicate for an unique Christmas decoration

By Susan B. Howard

THE candle trow (trow meaning tree) is the oldest approach to the Christmas tree. Its use in England dates at least from the 15th Century when frames of oak, of tree-form, were covered with wax tapers and carried in procession at Epiphany and at Twelfth Night.

At the Pennsylvania Farm Museum 1954 Christmas celebration, a "trow" was arranged with both candles and marchpanes, the latter made from the unusually fine collection of molds owned by this Museum at Landis Valley. Pictured is Mrs. C. Brooks Riegle, Administrative Assistant to the Director, displaying the original mold which many of our readers will remember as the illustration on Spinning Wheel's 1950 Christmas cover. Also on the tree are papier-mache decorations made not only from marchpane molds, but also from butter molds.

Making these papier-mache casts is quite easy. Here is all you do. Oil the mold with olive, or some good vegetable oil. Lay on sheets of facial tissue, wetting with a good thin paste. Keep the entire wad of paper wet with paste, layer after layer. Press in tightly with the fingers or a sponge. Let dry overnight. Paint, all over, with white water color, then decorate in colors of your choice. Two casts, laid back to back, and glued on the edges with a pure white adhesive, yields a lovely tree decoration—and one that can be used year after year.

Toys by Schoenhut

By Carl W. Drepperd

IN 1905, the A. Schoenhut Company of Philadelphia held the unique position of being the only "foreign" toy factory to ship toys to Germany. The quantity of Schoenhut Toys imported by various German concerns literally caused something of a crisis among the German toy industry. It all started with the Schoenhut Humpty Dumpty Circus and its articulated animals and performers. There was nothing like this circus anywhere in toyland. But to assume that the Humpty Dumpty Circus was the only toy line made by Schoenhut is an error. If any of you who read this, also read that delectable book about bookselling by Lawrence Romaine titled "The Weathercock Crows" you will remember in one of the poems "Weathercock" crowed thus:

"A stack of sermons over here await
my stern perusal,
A pile of ancient catalogs, Carl Drepperd to bamboozle."

I protest the word bamboozle. I was not bamboozled, for one of the catalogs purchased was the complete catalog of the Schoenhut Company. And having that ready at hand I am privileged to relay to you, one and all, at this happy season, the complete listing of what Schoenhut made in the way of toys. That you will be astonished for the moment is only natural. That you will go your way rejoicing and seeking what, in this list, intrigues you, is to be expected. My own mouth is watering, so to speak, wishing that I had a series of the wooden haired all-wood articulated dolls to dress properly for a Creche, accompanied by some of those Humpty Dumpty animals. That is only one idea. Within the list are scores of ideas.

Doll collectors of seasoned status know about Schoenhut's Art Doll. My catalog insert states it is the Newest Invention in Dolls. Each doll foot was drilled with two holes, one going straight in and the other drilled obliquely. This was to provide positioning the doll on a metal stand (provided with all dolls) enabling the doll to be stood upright posed in normal standing position or on tiptoe! These dolls were of all wood construction, with steel spring joints; articulated for natural posing, and free of all rubber which was deemed subject to deterioration. "Will outlast fifty dolls of any other make" was the boast of the makers. The headlines of the Company read as follows: "American ingenuity and production; fully jointed figures made from solid wood; a real mannikin; can be washed; no broken heads; real character faces modeled after pretty children, boys and girls as you see them on the street. Modeled by Famous Artists. No more old time doll faces. Jointed with steel springs and hinges with swivel connections. Cannot twist off. No restringing. No rubber cords." Some of these dolls had molded-on wood hair, others had mohair wigs. There were infant and tiny tot models.

Schoenhut also made toy pianos in various sizes, priced 25¢ to $20.00. They made a play set titled Mary Had a Little Lamb, the lamb being made in the style of Humpty Dumpty Circus animals, but the set composed of Mary, Lamb, feed box and school desk. Another "set" was called "The Farm" made up of 13 pieces, including doll figures of Farmer and Wife, cow, milking pail and stool, donkey, geese, pig, lamb, etcetera.

Schoenhut made toy guns firing rubber balls, and exploding paper and percussion caps. They made shooting gallery panels, in toy size for children's use (and grown ups, too) the weapons being rifles and cannons, patented 1900 and 1901.

Real Baby's or crawling infants toys were made . . . called the "Rolly-Dollay". There were 39 varieties of these, in a line comprising sixty different as to subject or size. They were priced at from 25¢ each upward to $2.

Few people realize that Schoenhut also introduced the Vocophone band instruments; you hummed the tune into the mouthpiece and it came out as music! The full list of these included clarinet, tuba, baritone, alto, concert horn, small clarinet, tenor, bass, large baritone, sub-bass, bass, slide trombone and two hunting horns.

Finally, Schoenhut made over forty different styles and grades of sailboat models, ranging in price from 5¢ to $15. In 1901 they patented the extending keel (October 21, 1901) for toy boats. The line comprised two masted schooners, racing yachts, dorys, ketches, and pleasure yachts.

This volume of fine toy production so early in the 20th century someday will, one feels quite sure, appeal to some collector-writer and a definitive study of the Schoenhut production, fully illustrated, will be forthcoming. Many of the toys were patented and most of the patents were taken out in 1902 and 1903. The catalog I purchased from Mr. Romaine was sold, originally, for 10¢ a copy and contains rhymes for every type of grouping of the Humpty Dumpty circus figures. The illustrations are from photographs, quite small in size, so reproduction of them is impossible here. But pictured are various Humpty-Dumpty groupings . . . all of them as intriguing today as they were fifty years ago.

Sideboard Extension Table of 1869

If, in the year 1870 you had strolled down Fulton Street, Brooklyn, New York and stopped at the Furniture Emporium of J. G. Reitner or, on Manhattan, at the shop of Rudolph Lenz at 85 Duane Street, you could have seen this table. Did we not know these dates authentic, we might think it had escaped from the Regence period of England. Look well at this picture, direct from Mr. Lenz's shop, 85 years later. The case of drawers was the sideboard cabinet for napery and silverwares. Pulling apart the two halves of the top revealed a nest of six extension boards by which the table could be extended to more than twice its normal diameter. The extension boards had special and newly designed locking tenons and the extension rails were of wrought metal. Of all the furniture of the period of its making, this table would seem to stand out stylewise and uncommonly sensible. So it is worthy of our attention at least fifteen years before it reaches a century of age. We feel safe in estimating that at least 100 of them must have survived the years, making a possible 100 opportunities for today's wise collectors.

Two Christmas plates from the Royal Copenhagen factory, Left, Village Church and Countryside in Winter (an enlargement from this month's cover); right Shepherds in the Fields.

The Christmas Plates of Denmark

By Marian C. Mickelwait

EVERY year, for over fifty years, as the Christmas season approaches there has appeared in Denmark a beautiful blue and white porcelain plate–the famous Christmas plate. Each year a new and different one appears. For collectors, the advent of the plates has added one more piece to a fascinating collection—and for the lovers of porcelain another treasure.

"Tinted like the blue of heaven after rain—
Such as it appears between the clouds".—
A. D. 954

These words of the Emperor Chetsong could well describe the Christmas plates of Denmark. These are not ordinary plates for they possess a quality that sets them apart. The translucence of the porcelain, the smooth hard whiteness with the exquisite coloring of cobalt blue presents lasting beauty. These masterpieces of the potter and the painter are carrying on a tradition, the tradition of fine Danish porcelain, long recognized as characteristic of Denmark. For nearly two hundred years in this country fine porcelain has held the interest of the people as well as the interest of the reigning monarchs.

Two factories, the Royal Copenhagen Factory, founded in 1779 with the royal sanction and support of the Queen Dowager Julianne Marie, and the Bing and Grundahl Factory founded in 1853, produce the plates. The distinguishing marks of these factories have a national significance. The mark of the Royal Copenhagen factory has three dark blue wavy lines indicative of the three arms of the sea which divide the islands of Zealand and Funen from Jutland; the Sound, the Great Belt and the Little Belt. The blue lines are surmounted by a crown and the words Royal Copenhagen. The identifying mark of Bing and Grundahl is that of the three towers over the word Kjobenhavn and below, the initials B and G in dark blue.

The name of the plate is taken from the season of the year in which the first one was produced—Christmas. On the border of each plate appears the year of issue and the inscription "Jule Aften" (Christmas Eve) or "Weihnachten" (Christmas). They are produced in limited quantity and the interest they have excited through the years has made them collectors' items. There is a regular contest among the artists to determine the design to appear on each plate. After the plates are made the mould is destroyed. They are never reproduced. Since the first plate of Bing and Grundahl in 1895 and that of Royal Copenhagen in 1908 there has never been an omission by either factory in any year.

The subjects chosen for the plates are characteristic of the country and the people. The love of nature, the home and the fatherland are subtly told in the designs—as though pages from Danish history had come to delight and adorn.

Many of the subjects for the decoration have Christmas as the theme and depict both the gayety and the solemnity of the season. The first Royal Copenhagen plate in 1908 shows Mary and the Baby Jesus and the blue and white porcelain was a choice medium for the subject. For centuries blue has been symbolic of the Virgin Mary and the brilliant white has denoted purity. Among others of a similar theme are the Three Wise Men Show Homage to the Christ Child for 1910; for 1916, Shepherds in the Fields; the year 1901, The Three

Sages From The East and for 1898, the Christmas Roses and the Christmas Star.

Family life at Christmas has been a popular and an interesting theme as shown by the plates of 1912, the Old Couple and Their Little Christmas Tree and 1913, Carrying The Christmas Tree Home.

In 1915, Sleighing to Church on Christmas Eve tells of a festive family occasion and in 1918, The Fishing Boat Sails Home on Christmas Eve portrays the joy of the weary fishermen as they return to their families. The Bing and Grundahl plate of 1915, The Watch Dog Gets His Double Ration on Christmas Eve, is particularly appealing.

The church in the life of the country is shown in many plate decorations. In 1908, is shown The Saint Petri Church of Copenhagen; in 1910, The Old Organist Plays on Christmas Eve; and in 1923, The Village Church—the famous church at Boeslunde. The plate for 1936, the twin-steepled Cathedral of Roskilde where the kings of Denmark sleep in eternal peace; and for the season of 1949, the Cathedral of Copenhagen—the church of Our Lady.

In the mere mention of some of the various subjects one cannot do justice to the beauty of the plates. In the possession of a single plate one possesses the ultimate of potter's art. Art like music requires no passport to cross international barriers. This has been exemplified in the desire of people throughout the world for the fine underglaze porcelain.

It was Marco Polo, the most remarkable of tourists who brought back to Venice the first examples of porcelain. In our books, we find porcelain treated together with pottery. But pottery is as old as history, while porcelain on the other hand did not become known in Europe until the thirteenth century when the method for producing it was brought from China.

Underglaze porcelain which forms the Christmas plate has a body that is smooth, white and hard being made by an exacting technique in the blending and the firing of kaolin clay, quartz and feldspar. The technique offered many disappointments and success was attained only by the complete mastery over the idiosyncracies of the medium. The dazzling white expanse of the medium which is to be coated with the transparent glaze is the background into which the design must imperceptibly melt. The glaze is so united with the body as to appear a part of it. It is the depth of the tone that brings forth the magic quality—and the tone is determined by the exact thickness of the pigment applied. With the painter his guide is fine instinct. It is this mastery of medium and pigment that gives to the Christmas plates their poetic charm. This porcelain cannot be successfully imitated. A knife will not scratch it.

In no other porcelain will you find the tender, dreamy melancholy of native ballads told as in the varying shades of the blue and white Christmas plates. Let us look at the one of 1907, the Little Match-Girl from Andersen's fairy tales and again in the 1939 plate, the charm of Old Shut-Eye from another Andersen tale.

The love of country is shown in the Bing and Grundahl original of 1895, The Sky-Line of Copenhagen seen through a frosted window; in 1896, the New Moon Over the Snow-Covered Spruces. The Royal Copenhagen plates of 1909 and 1921 show a Danish Landscape Seen Through the Pine Tree Branches and Old Houses at the Town Square, Aabenraa, Denmark.

Scenes of national interest have found their place on many plates. Old memories are awakened by the plate of the old flag of Denmark—the oldest flag of the oldest kingdom. Among others of a similar theme are The Hermitage — The Royal Hunting Lodge, in 1934; and in 1936, the King's Guard at Amalienborg Castle, the Winter Palace. Who cannot but recall when the blue and white picture of Kronberg Castle meets the eye in the plate of 1935, the tragic lines of Hamlet as he conjures up the ghost—

"If thou hast any sound, or use of voice, Speak to me—."
"I am thy father's spirit, ——."

In other plates the themes have opened a wide vista in related fields of history, customs and manners—the aspects of civilized life. In the blue and white porcelain we find, as in all true art, something that is living and lasting—a medium that stimulates the imagination. How true this is of Christmas plates! No blue and white plates are so much admired by artists and connoisseurs and lovers of beautiful porcelain as the Christmas plates of Denmark with the simple inscription encircling an enchanting theme — "Jule Aften, 1895—Weihnachten, 1908."

LET YOURSELF GO! It's Christmas, you know.

There are many ways of saying it,
Relaying and conveying it,
But Lindeman SHOUTS for all to hear:
"Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year!"

Imagine a collection of Purple Slag without a demi-tasse cup and saucer! Or imagine a collection of cups & saucers without a Purple Slag Demi-tasse! You win either way. Ours is the rarity of this or any year; it's beautiful and proof and $42.50. We also have a 3¾" Purple Slag Swan & Cattail Vase with 1879 Eng. reg. mark $17.50.

'Twas the night before Christmas and all the boys made merry! Sure they did. And sure we have a magnificent pair of early, paper-thin cranberry Mary Gregory tumblers, one child faces right & the other faces left, unusual gold dresses, multi-colored enamel florals, gilt rims, tiny inverted thumbprint pattern, and what more is there to want! These are choice and $28 pr.

HOOPS, my dear! Pr. gold Hoop Earrings for pierced ears, beautifully chased, and a terrific 1¾" diameter $11 tax-pd. Elaborate gold with coral earrings & matching brooch, dripping with pendants, truly sensational $24.75 tax-pd. Other jewelry at bargain prices too.

Sorry, ma'm, but your set of Copper Lustre Tea Leaf is incomplete. Well, then, where are your demi-tasse cups & saucers! We have just six (Shaw), without embossing; fine lustre, 2" tall, 2" diam. $57.50.

Who will be the first distraught, desperate, determined damosel to discover that we have two Meakin Moss Rose cups and saucers $10 ea.

Audubon enthusiasts and nature-lovers should swoon when they see this Chamber Set of finest porcelain (not Ironstone), elegantly decorated with what seem to be hundreds of birds, flora and fauna that defy description. Each piece is different. We have the bowl and pitcher, the smaller pitcher, the shaving mug and the slop jar with cover. Gobs of gold trim. Whoever gets this may prepare for something wonderful. Just $42.50 express prepaid.

Eight sparkling Haviland Silver pattern chocolate cups & saucers $52. Ten sumptuous Haviland American Beauty with Dropped Rose pink ramekins and matching plates $85. Complete service for four in Haviland pink wild rose pattern: Dinner plates, supper plates, soup plates, dessert dishes, butter pats, cups & saucers, covered round tureen, covered oval tureen, platters, gravy, butter, sugar, pickle $65. Early Haviland Wedding Ring (CFH) in cake plates, tureens, cream & sugar, etc., write for listing.

If it's color you want, it's color we've got in fine pattern glass, all old! Ruby Thumbprint individual creamer $6.75. Blue Dahlia milk pitcher $18.75. Amber Queen covered butter $17.50. Antiques in the Kitchen

By

NADINE MILLS COLEMAN

The Early American Theme Need Not Be Confined To Certain Rooms In The Home. There's No Restriction On Antiques In The Kitchen, Either Decoratively, Or Practically, As This Ingenious Collector - Homemaker Has Proven.

NOTHING gives a feeling of snugness like a kitchen furnished with antiques. The room does everything but hand you a cup of tea.

The carpenter was glum because I insisted on hardwood flooring. "Ma'am, linoleum would wipe up easier," he pointed out.

"But I designed, and hooked rugs especially for my kitchen," I said.

He shook his head wonderingly, and went back to his tools.

"Linoleum for the bathroom—yes—but hooked rugs will give such a homey effect against the random-width pegged plank floors," I explained.

"It takes all kinds of people —".

Why not, I asked myself, sit in a wing chair while food simmers? When serving time comes, the tilt-top table comes down in a matter of moments--- and there you are.

Even the soft, chugging sound of the automatic washer is pleasant as you leaf through a magazine while waiting for the laundry to ready itself for the clothesline just twelve steps outside the kitchen door.

We passed up the chromium dining set, and watched the papers for auction sales. All of the pieces shown, including a pair of matched hutch cupboards not in the picture were purchased at auctions. The knotty pine dish bar was made by my husband, and it conceals sink and automatic dishwasher.

Now I'm wondering why someone doesn't make an efficient range look like an old-time cook stove — with black ornamental iron warming shelf, and reservoir.

It's a cheerful room—our kitchen—and it sings with color. The ivy wallpaper and honey-colored pine satisfies even the artist's eye.

Instead of dashing off after meals, family and friends linger instead for that extra cup of coffee, and folksy talk.

Buskboards

By MABEL E. OAKS

WEBSTER gives meanings of the word busk as, first, a corset steel and, second, a corset. Behind that dull definition lies a fascinating story. Women, from the beginning of time, have tried out countless ways to improve on nature, and the busk was an early favorite. During the 17th and 18th centuries, busks (broad, strong strips of wood, usually oak or hickory) were placed in centerfront pockets of hand-sewn corsets to control the abdomen and help shape the stiff, wooden figure then fashionable. Sometimes the homespun cloth garment, laced tightly behind, was beautifully quilted in patterns. Sometimes there was a backboard, too, for better posture.

The word busk is derived from the Latin "boscus," a thicket or wood, hence something made of wood. Later, as often in word usage, the part became the whole, busk then referring to the garment and buskboard to the wooden piece. Busks were also called confiners, bodices and stays (older spelling, staise) before they were corsets. A buskin (busk with diminutive ending) was a small corset for the leg —a half boot. Derivation of the word corset, too, is of unexpected interest; corpse used to be spelled without the letter p—as corse—so, with the diminutive suffix et, we have corset—a little inanimate body to put on a large, living body. Bodice was just a variant spelling of "bodies," plural of "body."

Busks were often skillfully hand-carved and given by men to sweethearts and wives as presents, especially on St. Valentine's Day. Later, not only wood but baleen (whalebone) and ivory were cut into veritable works of art. On the long clipper ship voyages, many sailors whiled away their time whittling and carving gifts for loved ones on shore, which became known as scrimshaw work.

In the Marine Museum on the first floor of the Old Boston State House are displayed 7 baleen and ivory busks, true museum pieces. The amazing variety of clear-cut carvings on one of these I jotted down: at the upper end, a girl leans against a flower-filled urn, at the bottom a mermaid coyly curls her tail; between these are a fish, a bouquet, a meeting-house complete with steeple and two colonial houses. All these are on one 2½ by 12 inch ivory busk, pricked with a knife's point and rubbed with tobacco ashes to darken and bring out the figures. I wonder whether the feminine recipient of this busk was pleased with the mermaid, representing competition even at sea. Designs on the dark gray whalebone were occasionally dyed in color, to make them more distinct.

I have read that members of one early New England church objected to their minister's wife's wearing of a busk and a "topish" hat, whatever that was; such sinful vanity was not to be tolerated.

Writers on the Colonial period tells us that children of both sexes then wore small copies of adults' clothes; little girls of 8 or 10 would wear long skirts and rigid stays. I quote from Alice Morse Earle's "Child Life in Colonial America". "I have seen children's stays made of heavy strips of board and steel, tightly wrought with buckram or canvas into an iron frame like an instrument of torture. These had been worn by a 5 year old girl. I have been told of tin corsets for little girls but have never seen any such abominations. A pair of stays is still in existence that were made for a 2 year old girl."

Some unhappy little boys wore them, too—also men. In the days of King James 1st of England, a gentleman's dress was elegant indeed, and many of the fops at court were not above wearing stays. By the way, did you know that earrings and other jewelry, fans and muffs were all used first by men, not women?

The word strait-laced originally meant wearing tightly laced stays, but it came to signify also a strictness in manners and morals—the implication being that easy clothing led to easy morals, freedom of the body to license. In these present summer days of scanty clothing, the idea seems far-fetched--we hope.

As time went on, buskboards became narrower and narrower. Some of the earliest were somewhat heart-shaped, about 5 inches at widest and open in the center for comfort (?). Whalebone busks had a certain flexibility, as did the few made of brass. I have one of each; that of whalebone is marked "Bessie Hills", with a daisy plant below the name.

My own interest in buskboards began with the acquisition of my great-grandmother's wooden one, plain, of hickory, interestingly shaped. Bought at auction for a proverbial song, my favorite is a local specimen made by John Cross in the early 1800s for his wife Martha. Sketched above, it has red painted hearts at each end and a green with black diamond design in the center, all well varnished. Both sides are decorated; on the side shown, the outline of a hand points to John's initials and his Latin declaration, "I love you."

The giver of a busk (board) always had the satisfaction of knowing that his love token was worn near his lady's heart, if not next to it. A wood busk, straight before worn, soon bent to the curves of the body which pressed against it and so immortalized a part of its owner's figure; as you can see in the sideview sketch, Martha Cross was a woman of generous curves.

In the 1890s—and later—the Sears Roebuck catalogue advertised lace-edged corsets priced from $.25 to .95. Customers were instructed to take 3 or 4 inches off body measurements when sending in their order; this squeezed down the waist but made the wearer bulge out above the corset in front and below it at the back.

Several of Alice Morse Earle's books have furnished me details for this article. The following verse, which seems to summarize it all, is from the pen of Oliver Wendall Holmes.

"They braced my aunt against a board
To make her straight and tall;
They laced her up, they starved her down,
To make her light and small.
They pinched her feet; they singed her hair,
They screwed it up with pins.
Oh, never mortal suffered more
In penance for her sins."

Keen Perception and Knowledge of Windsors in General Aided the Buyer in Recognizing The Rarity That Others Had Overlooked in This . . .

Windsor Love Seat ca. 1790

By Dwight W. Carlisle

ALL the great finds have been made and there is almost no chance of even the most astute dealers or collectors locating anything of unusual nature in the realm of 18th century antique furniture". Thus spake what we would call the complete pessimist. The man, or woman, responsible for the utterance, has been echoed by many collectors—and dealers—who just seem to know that everything good has been collected. Perhaps this is why five dealers in a row didn't even realize what they were seeing when a dealer carted this unique, unusual Windsor Love Seat, or Twin-Chair (take your choice—it could be either) to a recent antiques show. Robert Eldred of East Dennis, Cape Cod, couldn't believe his good luck when he had the chance to buy it. But buy it he did, and in buying it, he became the owner of a piece over which the late Wallace Nutting would have gone into ecstacies.

Made in the Windsor tradition with soft wood seat, hickory bends, spindles and legs, this Windsor is illustrative of the ingenuity of Windsor chairmakers. The twin-saddle seat is cunningly contrived, with lines that, were the piece Georgian, would be called "gracious". The two backs are joined with a carved block with a hole that, obviously, represents a minor missing part; perhaps a stand, or candle arm. When Mr. Eldred asked Spinning Wheel's representative what to do with the piece in terms of restoring a missing part, he was told to do nothing to it. This is sound advice when what the missing part might have been is a question.

Windsor chairs, as everyone should know, are primarily the Colonial refinement of the rural English stick chair, sometimes credited to the Isle of Man as the first place of making, 'way off in the dim past. Certainly its antecendent chairs are Gallic, or Gothic in tradition. Few of the books and chapters of books devoted to the American Windsor seem to have anything on a love seat, or twin chair, such as this. But here it is, in an on-the-spot measured drawing made within an hour of the chair's first public showing. It is 48 inches wide, and 39 inches high. Turnings are vase form, of New England style. It is now painted red brown. Look at this chair . . and don't give up hope of finding a comparable rarity. Such finds, while of great importance, are being made every day. That's one of the manifold joys of collecting.

THE GUN COLLECTOR

By R. O. Ackerman

Powder Flask Collecting

EITHER in conjunction with gun collecting, or as an individual pursuit, the collection of powder flasks has suddenly come into its own in recent years. As a natural result, values have increased greatly. Flasks which sold for 75¢ a decade ago, might bring as much as $35.00 today. Very rare examples are often double that value.

To one unfamiliar with the subject, a powder flask collection presents an insight into unknown worlds. Ornate decoration is the rule, regardless of nationality. One may be shown a colorful Arabian flask of camel hide and silver. A translucent one is oriental, hand-carved from jade and tortoise-shell. Another odd piece may have been made by an American pioneer, who allowed a gourd to grow between two boards—then traced a frontier map upon his flat bottle!

To some, these ammunition containers are cold, inanimate objects. To the collector, they make history's most stirring moments live again.

Many concentrate solely upon early American flasks. These are nearly always of copper, brass or similar metal, with various raised designs on one or both sides. A desirable feature is the retention of the original lacquer finish.

Some will have a tiny "view-port" of horn set into the side, for gauging the gunpowder supply. Some have internal compartments for carrying bullets or caps. A rare variation will be shaped like a rifle stock, or perhaps a bird. In sizes, materials and designs, the variety is seemingly endless.

Ray Riling's "The Powder Flask Book" is widely considered the finest single reference in the arms collection field. It is recommended to the beginner for the history, identification and evaluation of thousands of interesting flasks.

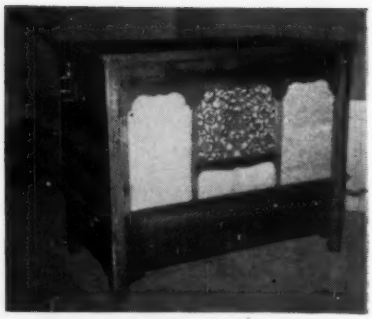
The Barrel Organ

Precision Craftsmanship Was The Keynote to the Music Produced by This Large Hurdy-Gurdy of 1848.

By Arthur H. Sanders



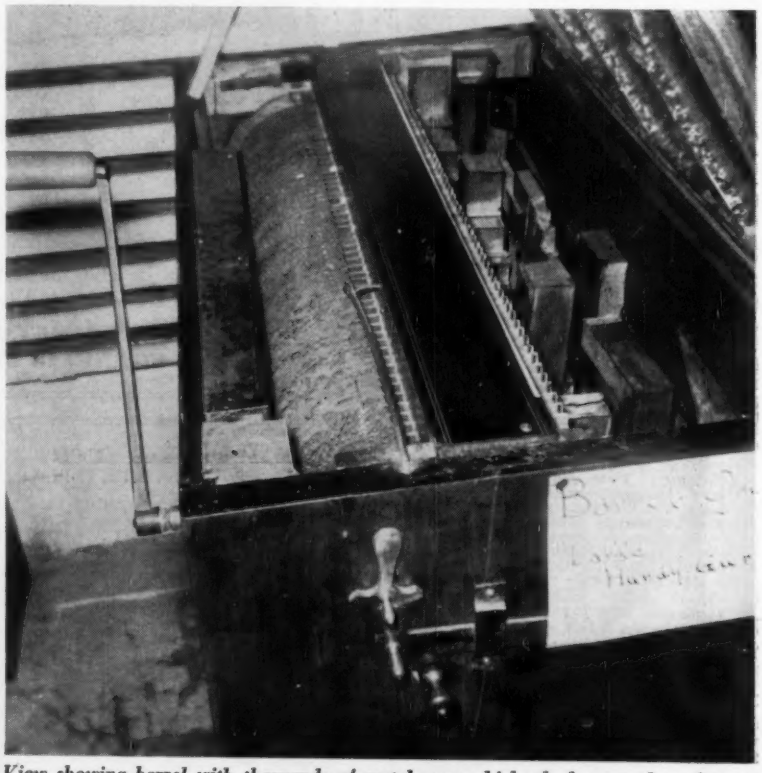
Attractive fret-work detail on front of German barrel organ done by hand with bow-saw.

THE organ illustrated was made in Kratzau, a small town near Pilsen in the German Sudetenland, now Czechoslovakia and formerly Bohemia. It was brought to the United States for use on a Mississippi river steamboat and the story goes that a blind negro man would crank it and extend his high silk hat for coins from the passengers as reimbursement for this type of entertainment.

It contains ninety-seven organ pipes from six inches to six feet in length, bent and fitted inside. In addition is a high pressure air pump, air storage bellows, and the barrel with metal pegs protruding from it. These thousands of metal pegs pluck open the valves to the organ pipes, thus creating the music. Their placement is most precise. The barrel can produce nine tunes, each selected by moving the barrel sidewise one notch in the pin which forms its axle. The brass fittings on the end (see illus.) are for this purpose. Turning the crank operates the air pump and slowly revolves the barrel.

The music has the effect of a little German band with piccolos, flutes, trumpets, cornets, clarinets and tuba. Reed pipes carry the melody acting as the trumpets and cornets. All other pipes are flue pipes, either stopped or open, and the band instruments can be recognized easily.

Made in 1848 of a close-grained wood (possibly pear), the organ and case show much evidence of hand work.



View showing barrel with thousands of metal pegs which pluck open the valves to produce music, long handled crank, and in foreground, brass fittings by which the barrel can be moved to any of nine positions for the desired tune.

Duncan Phyfe Is Not A Style

This Master Cabinetmaker's Production Was First In The Directoire, and Later In The Empire Styles.

RECENTLY, on a radio quiz program, the unsuccessful contestants failed to win $1,000 because they did not know that "Duncan Phyfe was a famous American Furniture Designer." They did not deserve the prize because they knew nothing about Duncan Phyfe but, in saying what he did, the wise master of ceremonies demonstrated that what he knew, or read from his card, was equally wrong. It is indeed remarkable how wrong impressions spread like wildfire. And it may well be that the antiques collectors of America can constitute themselves an organization devoted to correcting misinformation that spouts so glibly from the mouths of quizzers and other publicists. Duncan Phyfe was NOT a furniture designer. He was a cabinet maker, and a good one. The style in which he worked, at first, was "The Directoire." His later work included examples in the Empire and, it is believed, in the French antique style miscalled Victorian. This is significant because it reveals Phyfe as working in the French styles of his period of activity.

The sofa pictured, is indeed an important example of Phyfe's "Directoire" production. It is of carved mahogany, six feet, two inches long, with caned seat, sides and back, and brass paw feet. Phyfe made it, or it is documentarily attributed to him. It was sold at the Parke Bernet Galleries, in April, 1953 (at the Ottley sale). The X-form supports, in pairs, back and front, joined with boldly turned stretchers, the faces reeded (as are other rails and arms) and with carved bosses at X joints, bespeak master craftsmanship as does the carved backrail. The graceful curvatures—the front seat rail is the only straight piece in the facade of the sofa—is typical of the Directoire.

This same kind of fine furniture was made by other noted cabinetmakers, especially Connelly of Philadelphia and now, in many circles, Connelly's work is considered either the peer of Phyfe's or superior to it in certain details.

Phyfe operated his cabinet shop to within a year or so of his death in 1854. I. M. Phyfe & Company seem to have been an extension of the old Phyfe cabinet factory, functioning as interior decorators to 1858 and perhaps 1860.

One of the chief sources of misinformation in respect of furniture designs and periods would seem to be the manufacturing, and retail, new furniture trade. They turn out what they glibly call Duncan Phyfe style, Chippendale sideboards, and various other misidentified attributions. Crusading, actively, against misinformation is something every collector can do by writing gently but firmly to every radio and television station, and every newspaper and magazine that is guilty. Most periodicals are pleased to correct errors. We at Spinning Wheel consider it a public service . . . no matter how red our faces may be because of the error.

Ceremonial Marchpane Mold

By STELLA WYTHE

SOMEHOW, perhaps because I had the story of John Wise, America's great aeronaut, drummed into me as a child, I became interested long ago in the antiques of aviation. When I found this marchpane mold in Baltimore a few months ago, I recognized it as the airship Rufus Porter, of the early Scientific American, proposed for flight "through to the California Goldfields" in 1850. Porter's plan was a dirigible balloon, steam driven by huge propellers. Here, carved on a fruitwood block measuring some 8 x 14 inches is a representation of such an airship. Was it carved in the United States? Possibly; but again, it may have been ordered from the center of marchpane mold carving, Belgium, by a Baltimore sugar baker.

It is a mold for a ceremonial marchpane; a big one which, in color, would serve to decorate a banquet table or formal dinner. This example is probably only a century old. We have seen marchpane ceremonial molds made as late and even later. In fact we have seen them with high wheeled bicycles carved on them and even early automobiles and steam fire engines. We who collect marchpane molds would do well to let our collections embrace the entire gamut from earliest to latest. We had innumerable marchpane makers—sugar bakers—in our country and a goodly collection of molds is not only a thing of beauty and delight . . . it is also concrete history of the confectionery business.

Pedespeeds, or Monocycles

WHEN in 1870, Thomas Luders of Olney, Illinois, invented the pedespeed, the "parlor" or roller skate was a craze. In this device Mr. Luders had contrived a small monocycle for each foot and lo, had a skate of Mercurial swiftness which, alas, required practice for perfection. He also made them for Ladies, fitted with shields to protect the skirts . . . thoughtful man!

What have we to concern ourselves about in this presentation of the sprightly pedespeed? Simply this: these devices, when found, constitute an important link in the chain of what one day will be called the history of personal transportation. These devices, really, were more bicycle than roller skate. And as such, they are a part of the parade of personal transportation progress that culminated, finally, in that four wheeled device of Mr. Henry Ford.

Ford has been characterized as the man who put America on wheels. That is incomplete as a statement unless followed by the qualifying phrase . . . with a motor. The bicycle people (nearly all of whom entered the automobile business) were the first to put transportation without a horse in the hands of John Q. Public.

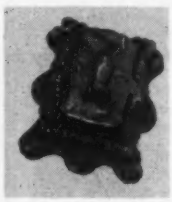
Stop at the Shops

Stop at the Shops takes you each month, on a little tour into antiques shops throughout the nation. Shown, in most instances, is merchandise representative of that which is for sale on today's market, or as the case may be services that have proven to be of particular value to antiquarians. Selections for this feature are made by Spinning Wheel as a reader service and details of description and authenticity are accepted from individual owners as being accurate.

Lotus ware produced by Knowles, Taylor and Knowles Co., of East Liverpool, Ohio, in the 1870s, has a peculiarly translucent bone china body with a soft velvety glaze, reminiscent of the quality of Belleek. The decoration, often figure work, is executed in enamel, built up over the glaze instead of under it.

similar to the pate-sur-pate method. Exquisite pieces were shown at the Chicago Exhibition, decorated in dainty colors, with jewelled decoration and openwork effects, some with raised coin-gold after the Rennaissance style. The squat pitcher shown is in all white, with raised design in a fish net pattern. From Jean Crutcher, New Carlisle, Ohio.

Inkstands from the 18th century pewter and silver to the porcelain, glass and other examples of the 1860's, usually included receptacles for sand, or pounce boxes, as well as ink. (Pounce was made from powdered cuttlefish bone and resin and used instead of sand as a blotting agent). Holes were provided for the quill pens, in use since the 1700s or earlier as standard writing implements till about the 1860s. Inkwell pictured is soft paste, glazed, in a soft streaked caramel shade with gold tracery. Shell motif appears at the base, which provides holders for quills at each corner. Cuffed hand on lid. Inkwell and sander under lid. P & S impressed and "14" in gold brush mark on bottom. 6½" long, 5½" wide, 2¾" deep. ($25) From Louise Williams, Dayton, Ohio.



French vase lamps or "oil pots", used first in wealthy European and American homes during the second Empire period, were frequently fitted with Argand burners, as are the examples pictured. Aimee Argand, in 1784, had perfected a lamp with a double walled burner which admitted oxygen and gave off a dazzling white light, and his burners were used extensively in mantel lamps, Astral or reading lamps. Oil pots shown are 25" tall, with swirled frosted chimneys, base is pink to clear mottled art glass with clear rigoree trimming. (Wired and burnished, the pair $125.) From Ann Wolf Antiques, Boonville, Missouri.

Cradles date from ancient days and have been produced in wide variety of styles, from simple boxes mounted on rockers to the great draped state cradles of 18th century France. Perhaps the most notably elaborate cradle is that of Napoleon's son, in the Empire style. Peasant styles bear painted or carved ornament, especially those from rural Germany, Switzerland or France. (We find examples of this type occasionally in the Penna. Dutch region.) But all cradles seem to be lovingly made, a quality which endears them to collectors. Though their original use has given way to the functional crib, cradles are still popular as decorative adjuncts and are put to many present day uses. Example pictured is American, early, of hand-hewn walnut, 36" long, with 36" rockers. ($42.50) From Dale L. Poorman, Fairborn, Ohio.

Old pewter has as its basic ingredient, tin, to which was added in varying quantities, copper, lead, bismuth, and antimony. (Zinc is a fairly recent addition.) There was no fixed proportion of elements. Earliest marks on American pewter closely followed the English, using perhaps a Crown and Rose, or Lion Rampant, in conjunction with meaningless square or shield shaped "hallmarks". Post-Revolutionary marks were often eagles, or States Coats-of-arms. After 1825, individual names and places, incised or enclosed in rectangles were in vogue. Sellow & Co., Cincinnati pewterers, worked from about 1830 to 1860. The 7½" tall teapot shown is one of their early pieces. ($32.50) From Cook's Antiques, Dayton, Ohio.

Shaped molds of unpainted tin for specific culinary purposes were made as early as 1500 in England for galantines, jellies and pastes. Through the years France vied with England in their production. In the 1820s American mass production began and continued at least till the 1890s. Molds were in wide variety of sizes and shapes. Jelly molds were popular in geometric, fruit or flower designs, while cake molds were most often in animal shapes. The Bear on Stump cake mold shown has an oval ring handle which pulls off bottom section to allow pouring in batter, and slide pieces holding it together for baking. It is 10" tall, 6½" wide, with mark 1309 over what appears to be 7 1 scratched over 12 in a diamond. ($15). From Lindeman's Antiques, Middletown, Ohio.

The tragic fact, our doctors tell us, is that every third cancer death is a needless death... twice as many could be saved

LET'S LOOK AT THE BRIGHTER SIDE

Many thousands of Americans are cured of cancer every year. More and more people are going to their doctors in time...To learn how to head off cancer, call the American Cancer Society or write to "Cancer" in care of your local Post Office.

1956 WILLIAMSBURG ANTIQUES FORUM: On January 23, the Williamsburg Antiques Forum will open, scheduled in two five-day sessions—January 23-27 and January 30 through February 3. Illustrated talks by the country's leading antiques experts will be given during the morning periods and afternoons will be devoted to informal discussions, craft demonstrations and tours of the exhibition buildings. The Williamsburg Garden Symposium, jointly sponsored with Flower Grower Magazine will have as the theme of their first session, March 7-9, "Bringing Your Garden Up to Date". The second session, March 12-14, will deal with "Your Changing Garden". It's not too early to file your registrations with Mrs. Cecil W. Cunningham, Registrar, Colonial Williamsburg, Williamsburg, Virginia.

ANGELICA KAUFFMANN ON EXHIBIT: A special loan exhibition of German drawings owned by West German museums and private collections opened at the National Gallery of Art in Washington, D. C. on Oct. 10, the first stop on a tour of American museums. Among them is 18th century Angelica Kauffmann's "Portrait of a Woman". For those of us who tend to think of Angelica Kauffmann primarily as a china decorator, it is good to be reminded that while this Swiss-born artist did work with china and porcelain designs as well as furniture and walls, she was first of all a portrait painter and one of the original academicians in England (1769). Her popularity in England was unbounded, and she was so greatly admired by Sir Joshua Reynolds that he twice painted her. Designs of her classic figures, executed in bat printing, which gives a delicate stippled effect, were introduced on Worcester pieces during the Flight & Barr period. Her figure work was superb. For private life peepers, she was born in 1741, died in 1807, was married twice, first to the self-styled Count de Horn (1767) from whom she soon separated and second to Antonio Zucchi (1781).

SPINNING WHEEL ON THE SPOT: Mrs. Warren J. Root of Berea, Ohio, gathering material for a paper she was to give to the Berea Collector's Club came across an article naming the Fairbanks House in Dedham, Mass., (1636) as the oldest standing wooden house in the United States. She was particularly interested since her husband's people traced back to the original Fairbanks builder of that home. That very weekend, along came Spinning Wheel, with an advertisement from The Country Shoppe in Westford, Mass., offering a Royal Doulton plate showing "The Old Fairbanks House". Mrs. Root and Mrs. Gustafson of the Country Shoppe developed a most happy correspondence. Mrs. Root, who bought the plate was delighted with it, and said so, and Mrs. Gustafson in turn was able to suggest that Elise Lathrop's "Historic Houses of Early America" carried a rather full account of the "Fayerbanks" house—and another Spinning Wheel friendship was born.

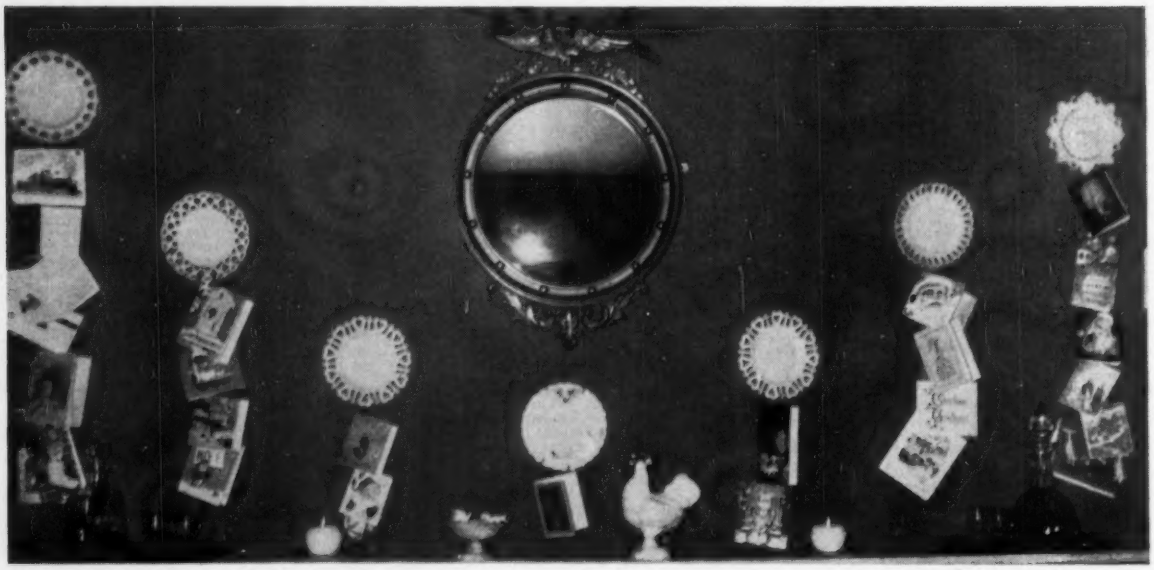
How Others Use Their Antiques . . .



Wall Decor with Milk Glass and Christmas Cards

TO find an effective manner for displaying Christmas cards is not as easy as it looks—and cards these days are far too attractive not to be displayed. That they can be made an integral part of Holiday decoration with a minimum of effort—and no possible injury to walls by tacks, gummed tape or other "you'll be sorry later" methods, is shown by Mrs. Priscilla Kitchell's ingenious use of her existing wall decoration as the modus operandi.

Back in the war years of '41 and '42, Mrs. Kitchell began collecting Milk Glass. Because her 2-room apartment was tiny, her decorative effects few, she began using the plates as wall pieces for space saving as well as decoration. Now, in considerably larger quarters in Philadelphia, Mrs. Kitchell has continued the same wall treatment, and against the deep velvet blue of her present living room walls and the Coachman's green of her maple furnished dinette, the Milk Glass is stunning.

When Christmas comes around and the cards pour in, she has a ready made answer to their display. Streamers of ½" red ribbon are tied to the plate hooks, and cards are pinned by their corners to the ribbon, making a festive and colorful Christmas garland of cards. The same idea could be applied to any wall pieces—sconces, mirrors, pictures of suitable size. In fact, it's such a simple, practical and thoroughly satisfactory solution to a problem we've all struggled with, we don't see why everyone hasn't thought of it years ago! We're very grateful, Mrs. Kitchell—and an especially Merry Christmas to you!
